

Telemarketing is the most annoying thing. Until I put myself on that list I was brought to the point where I would either hang up, or be down right rude and offensive and when caught without call ID I would become the baby-sitter just to get rid of them. Here is an idea for you...

...These people would be better off with jobs for say the telephone company, so as we might get to talk to a human instead of an automated system that never understands you.
